American lives are far more different from Taiwanese.

Comparing to spoon-feeding education in Taiwan, American tends to be more individualism. Therefore, I have learned a lot on training my critical thinking which highly related to problem solving skills. I become more independent and control well on my budget through this internship. I have solved piles of problems such as scams, card issue and transportation. Only if I act positively on my right, or problem wouldn't be settled down without starting any action.

People are extremely friendly to everyone and it is contagious.

When I first came here, I thought it was really strange to greet and start a short conversation with a person who I have never seen. Somehow I get used to it now and deeply feel the comfort about talking with people and sharing my own experience.

Furthermore, I joined lots of activities in UTD which emphasized on cultural diversity. Students and faculty members are respectful on the differences between the race, gender and culture.

I have never been in the U.S. before, I have changed a lot only in this short term. I thought semester internship is suitable for students to experience local lifestyle while planning some trips.

“Work hard, play hard. ” Furthermore, this opportunity will be perfectly suitable for people who still wondering about the future. Not only for expanding horizon, interns will be asked to set up goals and achieve it at last.
